RE: Comments on Proposed Revisions to the NCUA Chartering and Field of Membership Manual, Part 701

Dear Mr. Poliquin:

I am writing to the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) today to urge you to withdraw the proposal to revise the NCUA Chartering and Field of Membership Manual.

The changes proposed for the geographic field of membership rules are far too broad. The FCU Act requires that a geographic field of membership must be a "well-defined, local community." In this proposal, the NCUA mandates that a single Congressional district is automatically a "well-defined, local community." That change defies logic in many cases. Minnesota has eight Congressional districts, and a couple of them are very large, geographically. Minnesota's 7th Congressional District covers 33,429 square miles, and it takes seven hours to drive from one end of the district to the other. There is no way that people living seven hours apart from each other would believe that they are part of the same "local" community. And in seven states, it is even worse because there is just one Congressional district covering the whole state. It is very difficult to see how an entire state can be considered a "local" community.

Congress has set the limitations for geographic fields of membership. The National Credit Union Act states that the NCUA may approve a geographic charter if the credit union will serve a "well-defined, local community." In issuing this proposal, the NCUA completely ignores the word "local." Congress clearly intended the word "local" to be a limiting term. Otherwise, Congress would have only required that a geographic area be "well-defined." A regulatory agency is supposed to implement statutory language, not ignore it. With this proposal, the NCUA goes too far.

Credit unions receive extremely generous tax and regulatory advantages. In exchange for those advantages, credit unions have some limitations. The credit union industry does not like those limits, so it continually challenges them. They have asked Congress to give them more commercial lending authority. When Congress fails to give the credit unions this additional authority, the credit unions ask that the NCUA give them the additional authority. The NCUA then finds different ways to give the credit unions what they want, even though Congress has never authorized it. The credit unions want more expansive fields of membership. Congress has never given them this expanded authority. The NCUA then proposes this rule, which is inconsistent with the plain language of the National Credit Union Act. These types of significant policy changes should come from Congress, not the NCUA.

The NCUA has been criticized for being a “cheerleader” for the credit union industry rather than a regulator. This proposal is a good example of how the NCUA has earned that reputation. The NCUA has always gone out of its way to encourage credit union growth and expansion. However, with this proposal the NCUA ignores the plain language of the FCU Act. I urge the NCUA to withdraw the proposed changes to the Field of Membership Manual.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Kenneth D. Johnson
